IATA: Flying Is Safe And Getting Safer

There were 12 fatal air accidents in 2014 and two so far in 2015, but IATA boss Tony Tyler says there is no question that flying is safe and getting safer.

"Last year, the global jet accident rate measured in hull losses per one million flights was 0.23, the equivalent of one major accident for every 4.4 million flights," Tyler told those at an IATA Ops conference last week. "This was the lowest rate in history and a 60% reduction compared to the five-year rate of one major accident for every 1.7 million flights."

... Questions Raised

Tyler also noted that the recent air disasters have raised questions, with three in particular which have grabbed the attention of the media and regulators around the globe. "And that is understandable. Aircraft operating in open civilian airspace under radar control are not supposed to disappear, nor be shot down by missiles. And the first priority of all flight crew is the safety of those onboard..."

In response to the disappearance of MH 370, Tyler says the industry has moved to adopt ICAO's standard for global tracking of commercial aircraft. Following the shooting down of MH 17, governments and industry worked to find ways to reduce the risk of over-flying conflict zones. And based on the Germanwings tragedy, some airlines and regulators have implemented requirements for having two people in the cockpit at all times.

Tyler says aviation is the safest form of long-distance travel the world has ever known—and that it is IATA's responsibility to keep it that way.

... IATA Keeping Pace

Future safety gains will come increasingly from analysing flight data, says Tyler, adding that runway events, loss of control in-flight and controlled flight into terrain are the industry's three largest safety challenges.

IATA is also vowing to keep pace with emerging industry issues, such as the safe transport of lithium batteries and cabin safety.

"... if the last 13 months have shown us anything it is that safety is not fixed or static," says Tyler.

TSA Boosts Security

TSA workers at US airports will be subjected to stricter screening and background checks in an effort to 'address the potential insider threat vulnerability at US airports'. The new steps follow a review that was prompted by a baggage handler who allegedly used his position to smuggle guns from Atlanta to New York.

MH Pax Gallipoli-bound

Yesterday's Malaysia Airlines flight MH130, with passengers bound for Gallipoli, was delayed around 24 hours due to a technical glitch—but it looks like they'll make it to the dawn service in time, with the flight departing this afternoon.

QikServe's 'Waiter in your Pocket' app has begun to rollout at Amsterdam Airport Schiphol following a successful pilot scheme at the end of 2014. In partnership with HMSHost, QikServe is extending its initial 'at table' service to include an 'order ahead' functionality and ultimately, a comprehensive customer engagement and loyalty scheme. Carnival Spirit, Stranded Passengers on the Carnival Spirit, which was due to dock in Sydney yesterday morning after a 12-day cruise, were left waiting near Sydney Heads overnight due to severe weather conditions. The port of Sydney was closed and cruise ships weren't permitted to enter the harbour until earlier today, so the cruise ship had to wait.

A statement on Carnival Cruise Line Australia's Facebook page says it was notified this morning that the port had re-opened and the ship was proceeding to the terminal.

The delay means the next seven-day sailing will be revised and it will now visit Isle de Pines and Noumea, whilst Mare has been removed. Guests will receive a one-day refund plus an AUD50 on-board credit, whilst those who choose not to cruise will receive a full refund, says the cruise line. The disrupted cruise is now set to depart at 1900 tonight.

Business Looking Good For Cairns

The multi-million dollar refurbishment of 36 Horizon Club rooms and the expansion of the Club Lounge to include a boardroom with state-of-the-art audiovisual facilities at the Shangri-La Hotel The Marina Cairns is just one of the projects that is pushing the city towards a spike in business confidence.

Another big project is the $400 million "Nova8" seven-tower development in the heart of the city, a 1188-residential apartment build that will nevertheless be a boost for tourism with its 6000m² of retail space, celebrity restaurants and Sky Pool. And in May SilkAir begins direct flights to Cairns from Singapore, adding an extra 20,000 airline seats a year to TNQ. ATE 14 and the G20 international economic forum led to a new awareness of Cairns, which resulted in a 63% increase in business event leads, said Business Events Cairns & Great Barrier Reef director Rosie Douglas, adding that the Cairns Delegate Advantage Program has been extended to Palm Cove and Port Douglas following consultation with meeting planners and partners.

"An initiative of the Cairns Convention Centre and Business Events Cairns & Great Barrier Reef, the program involves 48 businesses offering discounts and value adds especially for delegates and these are included in a brochure in delegate satchels."

Keeping up with this growth is the Tjapukai Aboriginal Cultural Park, which has unveiled two new event facilities including the Bundarra Cassowary Egg Theatre which will host its first conference next month in the lead-up to the completion of the Park's $12 million redevelopment in April.

Other notable developments include the start of work on the AUD50 million Cairns Aquarium, due for completion in Jul 16 and expected to be a key tourism asset.
