HA Cements Local Commitment

Hawaiian Airlines today announced it would be ending its 30 year-plus association with its GSA company The Walshe Group to set up shop itself in the Australian and New Zealand markets.

HA is widely regarded as the catalyst for putting Hawai'i back on the Kiwi travel map, by adding competition on the Honolulu route and leading to more competitive airfares.

In a short statement released this afternoon, HA said the move to an 'in-house commercial business model' was in line with its growth in its Kiwi operation.

"Our business has now evolved in both New Zealand and Australia and it is appropriate to scale up our commercial resources in line with our operating presence and future plans," says Gai Tyrrell, HA's regional director Australia & New Zealand.

Paying tribute to HA's long-standing partnership with The Walshe Group, Tyrrell says the GSA company's contribution to building HA's presence here 'has been considerable'.

In a separate statement, The Walshe

Group says it has had a long and very happy relationship with HA. "So we are disappointed with this decision, however we understand and respect their reasons and wish them every success for the future," says the Walshe Group's Steve Tanner.

HA maintains it will be business as usual for the carrier in New Zealand. The changeover will be a gradual transition to the new business model, which is expected to commence immediately and complete by Jan 2016', says an HA spokesman.

While those in the industry have expressed concern for the current HA Kiwi team—a number of industry sources have welcomed HA's move to establish its own presence in the Kiwi market, with one 'calling it the final move to really cement HA's ongoing commitment to the Kiwi market, and to further grow its business here and in Australia'.

... What It Means

HA is declining to comment any further, at this stage, on what the move will mean to the carrier's New Zealand team—headed up by Russell Williss (aka Captain Aloha).

It is not clear if the positions will be filled by current HA staff, or if the local appointments will be retained. However HA did say that it plans to continue to outsource its reservations services. A tender process will be undertaken shortly, it adds.

Car Meets Runway

A jet aborted its take off at Los Angeles International Airport after an official airport car made a wrong turn onto the runway. The incident reportedly occurred at the same time air traffic controllers had requests for emergency landings from two other airliners. The Compass Airlines Embraer 170 regional jet, flying for Delta Connection, departed for Kansas City after a short delay. Airport officials reportedly called the incident 'extremely rare' and that the driver of the car wasn't cleared to go on or near runways.

The 'Cheek' Of It

Fans have come to the defence of a French 'adult movie star' after a staffer from airline Transavia posted a cheeky tweet. The 'entertainer' complained about the lack of details on a flight delay via Twitter. The carrier's response included 'it's just that with you, we prefer when it lasts longer', which enraged the star and her fans.

Passport Reminder

MFAT reminds travellers that from 30 Nov, adult passports will be issued with a 10-year validity, subject to the approval of the change to the 1992 Passport Act that's before Parliament. Child passports will retain the existing five-year validity. All current passports with five-year validity are valid until their expiry date.

The 10 year adult passport will cost $180.

Weaker NZD Won't Stop Family Travel

New Zealanders aren't forgoing their family holiday because of rising concerns around the economy and cost of living, according to Expedia.

Despite a weaker NZD, almost a third (30%) of those surveyed by Expedia are still planning to take an overseas holiday, though 9% are planning to travel to more affordable destinations or reducing the time they will go away for. A further third (34%) are choosing a domestic holiday in New Zealand.

A large portion of Kiwi parents make travel a key priority, ranking quality family time as the strongest motivation for making holiday plans (45%). It came ahead of having no interruptions from work (20%) and introducing children to new cities and broadening their horizons (16%).

When it comes to booking, price is a key consideration with the cost of accommodation (64%), flights (56%), and getting a 'deal' on accommodation and flights (49%) the most important factors.

To get the best deal, parents are researching cost-cutting measures online (63%), grabbing last-minute deals (30%), opting for all-inclusive holidays (26%) and signing up for travel loyalty programs (17%). More than one in five parents (22%) package their flight and hotel together to save.

... Where They Go

Expedia.co.nz is seeing strong year-on-year demand from families for package holidays to destinations including Melbourne (91%), Sydney (51%), Fiji (37%), Phuket (33%), and Samoa (29%).

Qatar To Adelaide

Qatar Airways has added another Australian city to its network, announcing it will fly daily to Adelaide from May 2016. The airline, which already operates to Brisbane and Melbourne, recently announced its plans to launch flights to Sydney. The New Zealand Government announced in Sep that it had signed an open skies air services agreement with Qatar, saying the 'opportunity now exists for Qatar Airways to serve New Zealand and this would be a welcome development'.

QF Los Angeles Deal

Qantas has flights to Los Angeles on sale until 16 Oct, starting from $565 one-way or $1099 return.

Airbnb, eDreams Improve

The Australian Competition and Consumer Commission has 'accepted court enforceable undertakings' from Airbnb and eDreams after it was found they breached consumer law by failing to adequately disclose fees. Both companies failed to disclose mandatory fees on key pages of their booking sites, says the ACCC. They have agreed to improve their pricing practises so mandatory fees will be incorporated into displayed prices, so consumers are given prices up-front. The result is part of ACCC's focus on addressing drip pricing.

Royal Caribbean Helps 'Refugees'

Royal Caribbean International's Vision of the Seas provided food, water and medical treatment to 45 occupants onboard a small boat sailing near Kusadasi, Turkey this week.

Coastguard was notified and responded to the boat a few hours later, says RCI. A Kiwi traveller who was onboard Vision of the Seas told NZ

Herald that ship staff lowered tender boats to assist the 'refugees', before they were transferred onto Coastguard's boat, leaving their 'inflatable dinghy' behind. Under maritime law ships have an obligation to provide assistance to anyone in distress at sea. Vision of the Seas is currently on a 12-night sailing that departed Barcelona on 07 Oct. The cruise includes port calls to Cannes; Florence/Pisa, Amalfi Coast, Rome, Santorini, Athens, and Ephesus.

New Lisbon Terminal

A new cruise terminal is set to be built in Lisbon, and it's expected it will be ready next year. Additionally there will be a rooftop restaurant, a café, a small shopping area, post office and chemist. Lisbon currently welcomes 550,000 cruise passengers a year reports the news agency, however, port authorities want to double this number over the next 10 years.

More Ships To China

Carnival Cruise Line and AIDA Cruises are set to join Costa Cruises and Princess Cruises in China come 2017; a move which signifies the growing interest in cruising from Chinese travellers. Carnival and AIDA will each have one vessel based in China year-round. Carnival Corporation will be the first company to operate four brands in China, which it says is expected to eventually become the world's largest cruise market.

This follows the news that Norwegian Cruise Line will introduce its first purpose-built ship customised for the China market in 2017. It is currently under construction.

SQ To Take Back Longest Flight

Singapore Airlines is to take back the title of world's longest flight from Qantas with the re-launch of its Singapore-New York flights.

Under an amendment to SQ's existing order for 63 A350-900s, seven will now be delivered with an ultra-long range capability, allowing flights of up to 19 hours.

SQ will use the new aircraft for the return of its 19-hour SIN-NYC flights, which it stopped operating in 2013. It will also re-launch flights to Los Angeles. SQ's first A350-900ULR is scheduled to be delivered in 2018. "Our customers have been asking us to re-start non-stop Singapore-US flights and we are pleased that Airbus was able to offer the right aircraft to do so in a commercially viable manner," says SQ Goh Choon Phong.

... And Amsterdam

SQ has also announced that Amsterdam will be the inaugural destination for its new A350-900 fleet, with services expected to begin by Apr. The carrier's first A350-900 (pictured) has been revealed in the airline's livery following completion of painting in Toulouse.

The aircraft is now set to move to the next stages of production, including the installation of engines and cabin furnishing, before starting ground and flight tests. The aircraft is scheduled for delivery in the first quarter of 2016.

Matavai Expansion

The New Zealand Government will invest $7.5 million in expanding Niue's Scenic Matavai Resort, Foreign Minister Murray McCully announced today. The funding will go towards developing a further 20 rooms at the resort, as well as conference facilities.

"This latest expansion will accommodate an average increase of 2000 visitors per year to the Matavai, which in turn will bring almost $1 million in extra revenue to Niue annually," says McCully.

New Zealand has invested $18 million since 2009 in developing Niue's tourism sector—in which time visitor numbers have more than doubled and visitor expenditure has increased around 90%, he says.

"The investment will also contribute to the Niuean Government's target of growing tourism by 10%, and its goal of long-term economic sustainability," McCully says.

SPTO Brand Change

Members of the South Pacific Tourism Organisation (SPTO) have approved a brand redevelopment project for the organisation at its annual meeting in Tahiti. Plans will now be put to the board for endorsement.

RoomsXML Rewards For 'Solo Agents'

RoomsXML is launching a version of its Real Rewards agent rewards programme for 'solo agents' or brokers.

"There are more and more 'work from home' agents like Travel Managers... and the trend will continue," says roomsXML Asia Pacific managing director Mark Luckey.

"Solo agents can't hit the targets that an agency with four or five staff can. So we have tailored rewards for the individual agent to give them something to aim for. They are a valued part of our business."

RoomsXML has issued 'piles' of vouchers, with some agencies earning in excess of $800 per quarter, through the Real Rewards programme, says Luckey.

... Donations

Agents can also opt to give their money to charity, and roomsXML will match their contribution with the money going to a roomsXML-supported education initiative.

"Many support a variety of charities and I am astounded with the generosity of Australian and New Zealand travel agents. This quarter alone, agents gave up over $2500 worth of vouchers," says Luckey. "When matched by roomsXML it means $5000 goes towards kids' education. It's great to partner with agents on charitable initiatives."
